Challenges Bring Growth

I don't know of anyone who likes to go through hard times or to be mistreated. We tend to try to avoid difficult situations or to get out of them as quickly as possible. It is only afterward that we are able to see how we have been affected.

Moses was brought up in Pharaoh's family, but he still knew who he really was. Because of his privileged position in Egypt, he saw himself as the deliverer for his people. Acts 7:25 tells us that Moses thought his brethren would also understand this, but they did not. In trying to help his people, he committed murder and ended up as an exile in Midian. This had to be difficult for a man who had grown up in the royal family in Egypt, but it was the 40 years in Midian that humbled Moses to the point that he was useful to God.

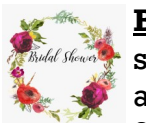

While facing hard times is never fun, we can be thankful for them because of the outcome. James 1:2-4 tells us that trials help to mature us to be what God wants us to be. Difficulties are a part of life that everyone must face. When hard times come, let's be attentive to how they can shape us to be more like Jesus.
